This was the very last resolution presented to, the congress today, after a week of hard work, and it was signed by Bebel. Singer, Adler, Hyndman, A. M. Simons, Jaures, Cipriani, Frank Bohm, Camille Huysmans, Robert Hunter and by every representative of practically avery nation.

Paul Singer, of the German parliament, who was chosen as chairman for the entire congress, pub the motion of Representatives from Finland, Po-

Representatives from Finland, Po-Representatives from Finland, Po-land, Austria, Bohemia, Russia, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, England, Scotland Ireland, Wales, Holland, Belgium, Ger-Norway, Denmark, England, Sootland, Ireland, Wales, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Hungary, France, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, India, Bulgaria, Roumania, South Africa, Japan, Australia, Servia, Argentine Republic and the United States and Canada were in attendance. Men and women of every tongue, from every section of the globe, all meeting in one hall for the purpose of discussing ways and means to gain universal and real peace. As much as they differed on other matters, all were united on one proposition, namely: the unconditional overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Republic of Man.

The biggest undertaking of the congress was the open-air demonstration held on Sunday afternoon of August the 18th, on the "Volksfestplatz," near the Koenig-Karlo-Bruce. That this demonstration was a complete success it is Koenig-Karlo-Bruce. That this demonstration was a complete success it is only necessary to state that the "Schwabische Tagvacht," the largest and best daily in Stuttgart, claims that about 100,000 people took part. Every trades union organization was there with its banner, and nearly every other citizen of the 260,000 in Stuttgart was in attendance. Seven different speakers stands were erected, and the following were some of the notable speakers, viz.: Frau Roland Holst of Holland, Bebel of Germany, Nemes of Bohemia. Third Day.

A short session was held, at which it was announced that 886 delegates, representing twenty-eight nations, were entitled to seats as delegates.

Telegrams of greeting and good wishes were received from every section of the globe, including one from Frederick Tessner, of the old international; Tom Mann, of Sidney, Australia; the Socialist party of Cuba; the Socialist Sunday schools of England; the Socialist party of Denmark; the Socialist party of Denmark; the Socialist party of Armenia; the Socialist movement of the Transvaal, etc.

Resolutions of colonial committee passed by congress, after much debating, in part as follows:

"The civilizing mission to which capitalist society appeals serves only as a cover for a burning passion for conquest and exploitation.

talist society appeals serves only as a cover for a burning passion for conquest and exploitation.

"The congress condemns the barbaric methods of capitalist colonization and demands in the interest of the development of the productive forces a policy which guarantees the peaceful development of civilization where the natural riches can be placed at the disposal of the entire humanity."

In the evening the Stuttgart comrades invited the congress to the shooting park, where a free luncheon was served and a general good time prevailed. The great occasion was the singing of the "Marseillaise" by representatives of twenty-eight nations. Everybody tried to make himself heard in his own tongue.

The trade union resolution passed by congress is in part as follows:

"The political and industrial organizations of the workers each have their distinct domain, defined by its nature, and within whose borders it should enjoy independent control of its line of action. The congress declares that it is to the interests of the working class in every country that close and permanent relations should be established between the unions and the party. The unions will not fully perform their duty in the struggle for the emancipation of the workers unless a thoroughly socialistic spirit inspires their policy."

In the evening all the English-speaking nations held a social evening at the Hotel Royal, opposite the depot.

THE WELL-BRED LABORER

BY CHARLES LINCOLN PHIFER.

HAD been riding on a through train, which was going at a speed that makes modern travel a dangerous, when there was a crash and I was pitched forward through the air. They tell me I was rendered unconscious. At any rate, I was found in a mass of debris by the side of the road, with a broken leg, and I am assured it was several hours after my arrival at the hospital before I came to myself. As a matter of fact, I did not lose consciousness at all. It is true HAD been riding on a through myself. As a matter of fact, I did not lose consciousness at all. It is true that I became oblivious to all that was occurring in the place where my body lay, but, by one of those slips in nature that produce unaecountable results, the real "I" was projected forward several years into the future and into a different personality. In those few years I consciously lived for many years.

The first thing that came to my consciousness was that I met a very agreeable young lady and began courting her. As I recall my experience I can count able young lady and began courting her. As I recall my experience I can count many occasions and scenes that I passed through during the period of courtship, but they were not in nature different from those that come to many in the mating season, hence I will pass them by. At least, we were preparing to be married, and it was while I was applying for a marriage license that my unusual experience occurred.

The license clerk answered my request for a license by spreading on the other questions similar to those asked an applicant for life insurance, were asked and answered, and then the clerk

"Are you a member of a labor union. Have you ever participated in a strike? Are you a Socialist: Did you ever read a Socialist paper? If your country should need your services in suppressing lawlessness and it should become necessary for you to shoot your father or brother, who was an enemy of the present order, would you do it?"
"See here." I interrupted, "what has all this to do with getting married?"
"Everything," was the reply, "You can't get a license unless these questions are answered satisfactorily."

are answered satisfactorily."

"Then we will stop right here and I wil go to the next county for my license."

The clerk leaned back in his chair and laughed. "Don't you know," he inquired, "that I am not operating under county laws, but under international laws?"

"International laws? I never heard of

"So I thought. And make your chil dren outcasts and pariabs. Great love, that is, I must say. But it is what might be expected from one of your class." I drew off to strike the clerk, but he struck me first a blow on the right leg which set me wild with pain. When the agony of it had subsided, I was lying on a cot at the hospital. They tell me I had just "come to," from the result of the railroad accident.

Pennsylvania on Pinkerton Perjured Testimony.

ORE than a year ago the Appeal printed the first authentic account of McPartland's operations in Pennsylvania, disclosing how he was employed by the railroad and mine owners to disrupt what promised to be a strong labor organization. Since the publication of that story, confirmation of the statements made have been coming in from many sources. The latest is from the pen of James A. Sweeney, special correspondent for the Pittsburg Gazette-Times. Sweeney telegraphed his paper from Hazelton, Pa., August 17, a lengthy account of the exploits of the conty too gland to get the job and bring in better results. If, under the proposed industrial system, the average worker in a steel plant produces a ton of steel a day, and if the produces a ton of steel a day, and it the work is so dangerous that one working-man is permanently crippled every hun-dred days, then to the ninety-nine days' ordinary labor must be added the one day of special labor that can be properly paid for only by charging the mainte-nance of the injured workman for the nance of the injured workman for the balance of his natural lifetime, to the cost of the hundred tons of steel. If one laborer must give up all his labor power through an accident every hundred days the labor power of his life's expectancy becomes as properly a charge against the hundred days' product as does the other ninety-nine days actually expended. This is not sentiment or charity; it is sound economics that also possess the unusual economic property of being just. The probabilities are that under a same system of industry the safeguards thrown about dangerous machinery and thrown about dangerous method the means of prevention employed to prevent accidents of all kinds will reduce the casualties to such a degree that few workingmen will suffer from such injuries compared with the number who are now ground up in the profit mills. The conditions then will be such as to produce normal healthy workers and protect them in all their faculties, so that the man who is a slow producer of industry may some day make produce industry may some day make produce tion so easy, and that the wholesome tion the tion to the lawy words may, to express opposites and to express opposites

It is possible that the perfection of industry may some day make production so easy, and that the wholesome living and ideas generated among people who get what they carn will make work such a pleasure that people will work for the pleasure of making things somewhat as they now work to make a game of baseball, and that they will produce the means of life in the same abundance as water or air or sunshing.

unreasonable to suppose that it may come, the problem of distribution will have been solved and no individual need be jealous of what is strictly his. But the business of Socialism is to deal with a more immediate demand. That immediate demand is to deal with a more immediate demand. a more immediate demand. That immediate demand is that no one be permitted to consume more than he produces until all who produce are guaranteed the right to consume the equivalent of their product. It will be difficult enough to accomplish this without figuring on an altruistic scheme, the consummation of which is necessarily so far in the future that but few can as yet conceive of it.

ORGANIZING A LANGUAGE

We have said before that Esperant We have said before that Esperanto is sense and science applied to language just as Socialism is sense and science applied to industry. In industry the "conservative," maintain that the haphazard, disconnected unorganized effort of competing individuals is the ideal system. The language conservatives tell us that the thought tools and wordsystems bequeathed to us as the result of this industrial chaos and interracial war make the ideal language system.

In the field of industry, the competi tive or chaotic system, or lack of sys-tem, results as every Socialist knows, in tremendous loss through wasted and duplicated effort, so that the labor ex-pended yields about one-tenth what it would under socialistic organization. The result is that the working class is deprived of nine-tenths of what it could create and use. In so far as language is part of education, the same is true in greater proportion. So much effort is necessary to acquire a language that necessary to acquire a language that little time is left for its use, just as the worker spends all his time now making a living, with the result that he has no time to live.

Esperanto is organized effort in lan guage, with the waste cut out. Let us take, for example, a simple idea, such as, perhaps, might be found in the brain of a horse or dog—the idea of approval or disapproval. Broadly, in English, we aire officers of the Barber Lumber company, residing in Wisconsin; John I. Wells, Patrick Downs, John Kinkaid, Louis M. Pritchard, William Sweet and Horace S. Rand.

It is charged in the indictment that the defendants entered into a conspiracy to secure for the Barber Lumber company 40,000 acres of timber land in Boise county by means of fraudulent entered in the secure in the through an accident every hundred days, the labor power of his life's expectancy becomes as properly a charge against the hundred days' product as does the other hundred as suit pending for the canceling of entire, and if 'bad' and 'worse' are of one family, any bright tries and restoration of the lands to the unusual economic property of being just.

Senator Borah demanded separate trial, and at his expressed wish, owing to suppose that "sad" and "horse" are closely related.

Let us take the same idea in Esperanto; beat, and the government as a suit pending for the canceling of entire; and if 'bad' and "other; and if 'bad' and "other; and if 'bad' and "other; and if 'bad' and 'worse' are of one family, any bright does not be product as suit pending for the canceling of entire; and if 'bad' and 'worse' are of one family, any bright does not pending for the canceling of entire; and if 'bad' and 'hose' are closely related.

Let us take the same idea in E mar bugaboo, all that's left is to memorize words so as to acquire skill in their use. In this, perhaps, Esperanto requires one-tenth the labor necessary for other languages. This means not alone a saving of labor, but economy of brain space, the most valuable material in existence, for while your brain may contain a square mile of cellular pigeonholes, it has its positive limit. After that is reached you may keep on cramholes, it has its positive limit. After that is reached you may keep on cramming in new ideas, but some of the old will inevitably give place. What would you think of a "factory" piled so full of machinery that not a wheel could turn! And old machinery at that! You might as logically use the best of, your land as a cemetery for dead horses and wornout machinery as to let your child waste good brain space and valuable energy on the conjugation of a Latin verb.

Esperanto throws away this useless rubbish, equips the brain with a clean compact system of talk, and leaves a big saving of space for the think depart-experiment with our little word mal. This simply means the opposite of any idea. In English we say "big." "little." idea. In English we say "big." dittle." large and "small." Takes four pigeon-holes in your memory to hold these words. In Esperanto we say granda, which means "large" and "big." Score one pigeon-hole saved. We say mal-

ECONOMIC CLASSICS

The Materialistic Conception of History.

HE materialistic conception of history starts from the proposition that the production of the means to support human life and, no to production, the exchange of things produced, is the basis social structure; that in every society that has appeared in history manner in which wealth is distributed and society divided into class "We do not fear that charge," said orders, is dependent upon what is produced, how it is produced, and Attorney Evans.
