That any so-called civilized state can still tolerate such unspeakable barbarism is evidence enough that we have not moved far from the stone age.

The state that whips a prisoner with a lash in the hands of an official brute has not yet emerged from savagery and it would still burn a human being at the stake if it were not for the humane sentiment of its neighbors which would cry out in horror and indignation.

The state of Delaware also still prides itself on its public whipping post and some day they who are responsible for this refinement of torture and quintessence of brutality may lift up their eyes in hell.

But as it is, the firemen stand oractically adote in the service, and if they strike the engineers in the same caba with them will virtually serve as strike breakers against them.

The backing these embattled coal diggers have is the United Mine Workers and the Socialist party. Here we see the industrial minon and the political party fighting together, as they should, shoulder to shoulder, and thus holding their own against a power overwhelmingly greater than their own.

We cannot afford to see this great battle of the miners in West Virginia lost. There is too much at stake.

This battle must be won and the whole power at our command must be brought into action until it is won; and distinct victory of far reaching results to all the organized workers of the United States.

FACTORY LIFE.

Recently Sir Thomas Oliver, who reputed to be "the leading authority of the English speaking world on work and health," gave his impressions of a six weeks tour of American industries, in which he said:

Two things particularly struck me in my visits to American factories—one is the fewer old workmen seen therein compared with England, and the other is the enormous employment of femals labor.

Fectory tile does not tend to the development of those graits which make home attractise. It does not enourage marriage, and by it maternity is discouraged.

Socialism is frequently charged with these very things by those who profit by them to conceal their own responsibility and to cover up the erime and corrup-tion of their own system.

It is in the fight against this mon-strous power that the miners are giv-ing up their lives. With them it is a fight against starvation, for life itself, but they are not fighting for themselves alone. West Virginia's Disgrace

A number of representatives in the regislature of West Virginia now in session have been caught with the marked bills in their pockets received by them as the purchase price of their votes for United States senator, who is to be elected by that body.

This is the crowning corruption of the state of West Virginia under the corporation-fidden administration which has been the curse of that state during the last quarter of a century.

To the millions of ordinary citizens these trusts are exactly as they were before and will be until the Socialists come into power and take possession of them and turn them over to the people to whom they rightly belong.

When the supreme court announced its decree dissolving the Standard Oil company and the Tobacco Trust the capitalist papers were filled with reports touting the decree as the weightiest and touting the decree as the weightiest and most far-reaching decision ever handed down by that august and venerable coterie of corporation lackeys. That was all sheer fraud and humbug. The capitalist editors well knew that it was a "stall" and that barring a few details of readjustment of no consequence to the record these trusts would remain the people these trusts would remain unscathed and would continue to rot the people to the extreme limit of their
