Shale Evidence Shows $46,-000 Was Stolen: State's Attorney Lacks Experience

Testimony was presented by Patrick B. Condon, a mason inspector in the son, yesterday.

Defense Tries to Exclude Notes

The evidence of Mr. Condon came after a frious fight made by the four attorneys for the defense to exclude note on the work taken by Mr. Condon during the inspections and, in spite of what spectators in the court declared a weak fight made by the prosecution. Judge Barnes was forced to coach Assistant State's Attorney Northup as to the form of questions all through the sossion. Frequently the court was colliged to question the witness himself, and at several points in the examination he had to fill in a series of questions that the prosecutor had omitted, ending with. 'Now, Mr. Northup, you may put your question.'

Negro Wins Over Jeff; Latter Blinded by Blow on Right Eye

Reno, Nev., July 5 .- I doubt very much if Jeffries, in his prime, could have besten Johnson yesterday. The black was indeed a surprise.

"Too much Johnson' was originally the title of a farce. Today it names a tragedy of sportdom. An analysis of the sentiment expressed here by the sporting men who are folding their tents and slipping away today would be difficult. While yesterday's battle certainly cleared up Johnson's record in a number of respects, and while the black man showed many of the elements of a tree sport, it is doubtful if a less popular champion ever held the title.

The outlook for a united working-class efforts is much brighter than even the most sanguine expected when this matter was initiated, and the recent action of Taft in securing a fund from congress to prosecute the labor unions under the Sherman anti-trust law, while trying to have the railroads exempted from the provisions of that law, has helped considerably in solidifying the ranks of the workers, and more so with ranks of the workers, and more so with the milroad employes than with the others, and in some counties it is claimed that there will be an entire working-class delegation elected to the constitutional convention.

Constitutional Provisions Advocated Among the provisions which are being advocated for the constitution are the following: Universal and equal man and womannood suffrage; election of senators-by popular vote; initiative, referendum initiative, referen and recall; legislature to consist of one house; short terms for judges; property to be taxed at its full value; state to have power to take over property at assessed valuation; state to have right to engage in industrial pursuits; anti in-junction; employers' liability law; gov-ernment by enacted law-Federal and State; abolition of the fee system, in the courts, petty and supreme; state to have the right to sieze the property of any person; partnerships, firm, company sulting from the per capita assessment levied by the Chicago Federation of Labor, is already beginning to pour into the coffers of the strikers' union, and the one thing that is now more certain than anything else is that the members of the chauffeurs' union will be considered in the confers of the chauffeurs' union will be considered in the confers of the chauffeurs' union will be considered in the confers of the chauffeurs' union will be considered in the confers of the chauffeurs' union will be considered in the confers of the chauffeurs' union will be company or corporation, that does not complany or corporation, that does not comply with the law of the state; state to defrag the confers of the chauffeurs' union will be considered in the confers of the chauffeurs' union will be confers on the corporation, that does not comply with the law of the state; state to defrag the confers of the co as the prosecution, in criminal cases; the power to declare laws unconstitu-tional to rest only with the people by referendum vote; six months' residence in the state necessary to qualify a citizen to become an elector; no private police or detectives to be permitted; no law to be passed that in any way limits the franchise of the citizens, nor no fee system in election or primary law; amendment of the constitution to be by majority vote of the people, on the ini-tiative of either the legislature or the Pichler came to Milwaukee two years ago and aided in organizing the Slove-nians of the city. He is an enthusiastic labor union man, being a member of the Journeymen Barbers' union.

Beached by Socialists

"There are about 10,000 South Sloveians in and around Milwaukee," says Pichler. "And the majority of these are Socialists. No other political party is able to reach them. Only the Socialist party is able to get in touch with a national committee, consisting of one them through its organization and literature.

"Not a Sunday goes by when we do not distribute literature among our people We know where our people live, so none of the literature is wasted." Pichler pointed out that one of the difficulties in reaching the foreigner in this country arises out of the fact that he is not familiar with the political and economic conditions here.

The congress went on record as con-demning the action taken by the na-tional congress of the Socialist party in Section 6, Article XIX, of the Socialist party constitution, referring to the matter of "Foreign Speaking Or-ganization."

This section says that "Members of foreign speaking organizations shall have no voice in national referendums or in the election of national officers of the Socialist party, except when they vote as members of a state organiza-

The sentiment of the congress on this matter was that all organizations affiliated with the national Socialist par-ty should have the right of referendum, and that there should be no non-voting membership.

The work among the Scand'naviar peoples of the United States made pos sible by the national organization of the Swedes, Norwegians and Danes is expected to be the death blow to the Socialist Labor party which, at the present time, has its stronghold among the Swedish people of the east.

To Reach Immigrants

"With a national organization of the Scandinavian Socialists we will be able to reach the immigrants arriving in this country from Europe as the na-tional organization of the Socialist parrganization of the United States. This sespecially true of the constitution tional organization of the Socialist party has never been able to do," said S. J. Christensen, secretary of the Scandinavian Socialist Agitation committee also a delegate to the congress.

"It is a peculiar fact, but the Swedish immigrant arriving States in the east has annual joined the Socialist Labor party, for whatsoever. There States in the east has almost always no segming reason whatsoever. There is no reason why they should do this We want them all to join the Socialist party."

Make Good Party Workers

This sentiment was echoed by Editor Haldden, of the "Svenska Socialisten." who said that the Social-Democrats (Socialists) of Sweden, arriving in this country, make the best party when the party can get in touch with "Through our national Scandinavian

United Effort Being Made to Secure Clean Schools in Chicago

This week is to see a flood of protesting resolutions poured in upon the members of the board of education, especially that of its president, Alfred R. Urion, "bell hop" and "office boy" of that "friend" of organized labor, J. Ogden Armour, of "beef trust" fame.

Against School Conditions

The protests will come from the local labor organizations affiliated with the Chicago Federation of Labor, and they will be against the unsanitary uncleanly and bad condition of repair in which the schools of the city are to be found at the present time.

This action will be brought about by resolutions passed at Sunday's meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor instructing the executive board to attend the next meeting of the board of education and make a personal protest against allowing the schools to go uncleaned this summer, while the local unions will send their protests by mail.

Urion Is Bell-Boy

During the discussion Urion was des-ignated as Armour's "bell boy," who sought every opportunity to prevent the Board of Review from fixing the amount of taxes Armour & Co. and other big corporations should pay on their capital stock. Henry M. Ashton, who is attorney for John C. Harding in a suit to compel the big corpora tions to pay taxes amounting to $1,000,000,000 on its capital stock, addresse the federation and denounced the loard of Review and the tax dodgers

His Jekyll-Hyde Role

"Alfred R. Urion is one of the men Ighting the payment of taxes," said Ashton, "He is president of the board of education. In the morning he is striving to get more money for the school board to expend and in the af-ternoon as Armour's bell-boy he strives Railroad Telegraphers to to prevent the collection of just taxes from his employer.

"There is no more corruption anywhere than in the collection of taxes on personal property. The wealthy pay little on personal property while the small householder and renter carry the burden of taxation."

Like Sausage Works

"We respectfully call attention to the that, under the business adminis ion of A. R. Urion as president of the school board, the factory system has been put in operation in the Chicago schools and the chief aim seems to be to grind the children through our schools at the lowest possible cost in discarded the humans and enin disregard of the humane and enlightened ideas of cleanliness and beau-ty of our school rooms," say the reso-

There will be a slight falling off in advertising receipts, although the prospects for the fall are splendid, as the advertisers all express themselves well satisfied with the work of the paper.

But there must be additional receipts from other directions. The money from the picnic was used before it was received to meet a few of those debts that have been so long overdue.

The circulation is growing, but IT MUST GROW FASTER DURING THESE SUMMER MONTHS TO MAKE UP FOR DEFICIENCIES ELSEWHERE.

MOREOVER, THERE MUST BE SOME IMMEDIATE

CASH IN ADDITION TO REGULAR INCOME.

At least $3,000 should be raised AT ONCE to meet demands that CANNOT BE LONGER POSTPONED.

If this amount could be raised at once it is almost certain that the paper would never need further assistance, but could go on improving and enlarging and increasing in power.

This has been the situation with nearly every call for the last two years. They have not been met IN FULL. Therefore the paper has struggled on under a handicap that made it impossible to take advantage of the circumstances that would have ended the struggle. The calls were met in part or the paper would have disappeared.

LET US MEET IT IN FULL THIS TIME AND END THE Mac

Labor Politics That Failed

Some one has said that progress is made by trying all possible wrong roads before taking the one right road.

It looks as though-organized labor was advancing according to that plan in the United States.

For many years it tried the road of "no politics." It ran up all sorts of blind alleys seeking progress in this direction.

Then the necessity for political action was literally beaten into the heads of its members with policemen's clubs.

Some progress had been made. At least one wrong road has been barred. It will hereafter be impossible to lead organized labor in the direction marked "No Politics."

This narrows down the possibility of error. But it still leaves many false paths to be explored if the guidance of reason is to be rejected. There are at least a dozen different ways in which labor may go into politics and all but one of them is wrong, and most of them are going in a wholly different direction from the way in which the workers want to travel. The first wrong roads to be explored was that of "reward your friends and punish your enemies." That ended by landing such jewels as McDermott in Congresssand Windes on the bench. Labor was once more smashed with the weapons it had forged.

Another road that is running closer to the goal, but which has many pitfalls on the way, is marked "Independent Labor Party."

This road was followed in San Francisco and few are now boasting of the reign of Eugene Schmitz. Nor will even the most ardent defenders of McCarthy wish to compare his administration with

If there were no political organization in existence controlled by labor, and, indeed, to a large extent by organized labor, then the road of independent politics would naturally be the one to follow.

But the Socialist party is here. It is democratically financed and controlled. No one disputes the fidelity with which its program reflects working-class interests.

If the Socialist party had grown corrupt and inefficient, if it were decaying and losing ground, then, again, it might be time for the union movement to seek to create a political expression of its own.

But the Socialist party is growing faster than ever before. It has its press, its licerature, its nearly fifty thousand members throughout the country, its speakers, its political standing upon the official ballot in many states, its international affiliations that draw to it great masses of workers who come here from other countries.

In no country in the world have the unions been able successfully to act as a political party. Whenever they have tried it in this country the result has been confusion and disruption on the economic field, and fusion and corruption on the political field.

The union does not possess the machinery for political purposes, It is not organized in accordance with the lines of political divisions. It is apt to find its energies sapped by an industrial struggle at the very moment when they are needed in the political fight.

Sooner or later workers of America will have tried the road until they learn that its devious windings will not lead them to freedom. equally as awkward and out of place. They will then have tried all the wrong roads,

They will then be forced to work with the Socialist party like the union men of every other country are already doing.

Some union men will have the intelligence to do this without first wasting their energies running down the wrong road.

International Labor Legislation

The fourth subject upon the program of the International Social ist Congress that meets in Copenhagen this summer is "The International Results of Labor Legislation."

The appearance of this subject is an indication that a new stage has been reached in the progress of Socialism. In some European countries the Socialist influence upon legislation has been so great that further progress within national lines meets with a new obstacle -international competition.

Nearly every improvement in the condition of labor means increased cost of production. While capitalism lasts it is impossible for one country to increase the cost of production beyond a certain very clearly indicated point, and maintain its position in the world

There is still another phase to this question. Many laws for the protection of labor require international co-operation. This is especially true of laws affecting seamen. It is also true of measures intended to prevent the wholesale importation of strike-breakers. International questions are touched in discussion of legislation guaranteeing the right of asylum, disarmament, treatment of political refugees, suppression of injurious trades and methods of work, such as the manufacture of matches from white sulphur.

It is therefore of the greatest importance that the various nations of the world should keep step in their advance. The only political party having its representatives in the legislatures of nearly all civilized countries is the Socialist party. It is the only party that CAN discuss international effects of labor legislation in an intelligent manner. Other parties are confined to national boundaries.

The Socialist party is the party that is most intensely interested in labor legislation. It is the party of labor. It is therefore doubly fitting that this subject should be upon the program of its international gathering.

. While one judge is trying to help the taxicab owners, another great strike is on in Illinois to secure the enforcement of the shotfirers' law in the mines, which an anarchistic federal judge decided that the mine owners need not obey.

With those dives closed in Milwaukee and no strike duty required, it is easy to give the policemen a day off every two weeks.

This is the time of year when "everybody" goes to the moun-

A LITTLE SONG OF THE SYSTEM

BY CHARLES EDWARD BUSSEL (In "Songs of Democracy.")

"A Little Song for 'the System' " is a grim satire that embodies siniste truth and portentous warning. There are certain ominous facts that jostle the thoughtful student of present-day politico-economic conditions on every hand. The increasing arrogance of privileged wealth, often termed the "System," its essential lawlessuess and anarchistic spirit, are only surpassed by its ever-growing because it has so largely gained control of the press, while it has even if he didn't get anything else rapacity. But it feels secure in its strangle-hold on labor or America's .oiling succeeded so markedly in its effort to surreptitionaly bribe into silence church out of his inventions. and college. Moreover, its retainers, lawyers who have for years proved their fidelity and intellectual cunning in serving trusts and corporations, are now so numerous in posts of vantage throughout the government that even to the superficial observer the insolence, arrogance and brazen rapacity of the feudalism of privileged wealth appears hazardous. The following stauzas deal with these things in an impressive manner:

"Still have your fling, my masters, Press on your pleasant way Heed not if huge disasters May skirt some other day: You are of the anointed And we but things appointed To serve your sovereign will-To serve and offer from our need The largess due from need to greed. Dear lords, be blithesome still.

"Debauch, debase, bemire; Load the altars with loathsome dust; Quench the old sacred fire, Give over to greed and lust. Freedom with things forgotten, Faith with things rank and rotten, Justice halting and cold,

No need have ye for fear or shame As with your hirelings you acclaim Always the lordship of gold. "Rot out the heart of the nation,

Control its courts and camps, Thrust into the highest station Your smug smooth thieves and scamps We know, we hope, our duty We sodden things and sooty; Take all and do not spare. What fault, O lords, have we to find, We serfs that bear the baser mind? Thieve on! We do not care!

"But the time will come, O rulers, O lords in fine array, When we shall fool the foolers, - And turn the pleasant play; When Force and Fraud will avail not And the awakened man will quail not But smite his bond in twain. What shall you say if he but ask The reckoning for his long sore task, And his stolen hours again?"

DELIVER US

The following editorial, under the head, "Uniform for the President," appears in the El Paso Herald:

The suggestion of the Army and Navy Journal that Congress provide suitable military uniform for the President of the United States is a good one The suggestion was brought out by the recent occurrence in London at the funeral of King Edward, when ex-President Roosevelt had to wear a dress suit in the middle of the day at the funeral of the late king.

The journal suggests that a uniform for ceremonial occasions should be provided for the President, such uniform to be his right after retirement, on the occasion of public functions and state events. It is pointed out that the President is the commander-in-chief of the army and navy, and, as such, should have a uniform, especially on occasions when fleets or army maneuvers are reviewed It is rather awkward to see a man in civilian clothes, surrounded by a brilliant staff, attending such a review and on such rare occasions as the Taft-Diaz visit at El Paso and the Roosevelt tour of Europe, the plain dress of the civilian is Rulers of all nations have uniforms; many of them a different one for every day in the year; it is customary and attaches to the dignity of the office. I should not smack of imperialism or militarism for the President of the United States to have a uniform. Instead, it would show good taste and prevent embarrassments.

A military uniform is appropriate anywhere, and if the officials under the authority of the President wear gold lace and epaulets and chapeaus, why shouldn't the President wear them!

Working Women in Australian Election

'Jeanette' says concerning the activity of women in the recent election:

A very pleasing feature in this par ticular election, and to me, a feature full of hope, was the number of young romen who recorded their votes.

The female shop assistants were more ager to vote, most of them going straight from the shop to the polling

Work-room girls manifested great interest, and many young women employed as domestic servants recorded their votes for the first time and not at

The young mother also showed excep tional interest in this election, many of them coming along with very young infants in their arms. Methinks this is one of the most hopeful signs. The educated, intelligent mother is the hope of future generations. Her interest and knowledge will be instilled into the future's men and wom en. Through her they will be encouraged to study, and will be set out or life's roadway well equipped for life's battles. Many of our present-day evils they will be able to avoid. Many of the present problems by them may be easily solved.

Much could be said for "our wom en" who have worked so hard and ac complished so much during the recent campaign. I speak of the eastern goldfields women workers, but have no doubt that our sister comrades in other parts of the state isbored equally hard. In one fortnight, considerably over one hundred women were organized into sub-committees, and it is wonderful the amount of work those women accorplished.

Streets in all parts of the electorate were systematically canvassed, sick voters listed, promises of support in Xa-

A more noble or more energetic band of workers it has not been my pleasure to meet, and I shall not soon forget the great and noble work done by them in such a short time. Sacrifices had to be made by every one of these women, yet they were made cheerfully and with the feeling "It is my duty." On election day I noticed at every polling booth groups of loyal enthusaistic women, many of whom had risen early to leave the home spic and span and meals in readiness. They were at their posts at 8 p. m., and worked unceasingly until p. m .- their only reward, the hope

SOME POLITICS

I have been reading the papers recently, and I see much therein concernit

In other words, says he, "when it is a question of putting one's hand in the public's purse the thin disguise of party and partisanship is laid off."

A day or so after reading that I learned that Congressman Samuel L. Powers Talking to friends in a fraternal order, he remarked that "a good moral character is necessary to membership in this order. But such a character is not possible in Congress and, therefore, I retired from Congress."

A few days after reading that I came across the unwise efforts of one Randell of Texas to get Jongress to pass an anti-graft bill. His idea was to make it a crime for any Congressman to receive gifts, imployment, or compensation from corporations Well, Congress didn't do a thing to Randell.

They literally wiped up the floor with that poor fellow, and I guess we von't hear of him any more.

I also see that the Rev. Henry M. STORIES OF AN AGITATOR

BY RALPH KORNGOLD. THE GODDESS OF LIBERTY

During this long, hard winter, Raphael, hoping to renew Nathan's faith, often took him to Socialist meetings. Raphael was burning up with enthusiasm.

He had brought his children to the Jewish orphan asylum where they were well taken care of, and where he could see them every week. This left him little else to worry about, and so nearly all of his thoughts were devoted to "the cause." All he desired for himself was a little food to keep body and soul together and a place where he would be sheltered from the weather; and he was able to earn this with needle and sewing machine

Things did not fare well with Nathan. His health. which had improved for a while, owing to the opportunity his present work allowed him to rest and to remain outdoors, again took a turn for the worse when the cold

A doctor of his acquaintance, after submitting him to a thorough examination, told him that he had still a "fighting chance," provided he went to Colorado or Arisona. But that of course was out of the question for

"What matters it." he told Raphael, "what matters it if I die? I've done my share of the fighting. I'm tired, awfully tired, and ready to be gone."

Raphael upbraided him.

"Why, man, what are you talking about? Tired at your age! Your best time is yet to come. Just think of all the fighting there remains to be done!"

But when alone Raphael did not feel so enthusiastic shout Nathan's chances for life.

"Poor fellow." he thought. "He's going down hill fast. If only I had money!"

Once Raphael conceived the idea of applying to the revolutionary leaders to save his friend, but he knew that Nathan would disapprove of it and let the plan drop. In the meantime the grumblings of the hungry multitude rose from every corner of the city.

It becomes a chorus persistent and articulate with just the suggestion of a threat.

On the street corners stood the Socialist agitators. preaching the gospel of revolt. They found eager listeners.

The terrifled capitalists were magnanimous in their charity, but charity no longer satisfied nor did it fill the masses with gratitude.

The Socialists taught and explained. "Organize! organize!" was their cry. "Don't croak like a frog's chorus! Get together! Show your numbers!' They scattered tens of thousands of bulletins throughout the city calling for a meeting of the unemployed in Madison Square.

The capitalists trembled.

concerned.

What if these thousands of men and women looking into each other's eyes, and finding there desires identical to their own, with gathered courage and determination and swept onward to a purpose! It must not happen! The meeting most not be held!

The police must keep the crowds moving and allow no one to address the multitude. So the police were out in great numbers-afoot and on horseback, plain clothes and in uniform. They were healthy looking, these policemen, the pick of the working class as far as physical development was

There seemed to be a special breed of them. They were all large, with round, fat shoulders, a broad chest and a wide girth. Their limbs were heavy and they were armed with clubs and pistols.

Their faces were not fighters' faces. A fighter's face is alert and aggressive, not without a certain touch of bravery. But these men did not have to be brave, they were a million times stronger than the enemy that confronted them, for besides being armed they fought under the protection of the batteries of organized society which threatened with destruction anyone who would dare to raise a hand against them. Theirs were faces of bullies and tyrants, men who had nothing to fear and who knew that they were feared.

Raphael had arranged on the preceding day to go to the meeting together with Nathan, and together they took the street car for Madison Square.

It was not cold. The sky was covered by a thin fluece of clouds through which the sun showed like a

In the neighborhood of Madison Square the crowds were thickest. People came and went, mingled in eddies on the street corners. There was a steady outpouring of humanity towards the square, where the multitude had collected in a vast, great lake, kept astir by the

"There is going to be a hot time," said Raphael. "I wonder if they will really dare to break up the meeting?" They alighted from the car and drifted on with the
