Labour Fakery Responsible for War.

Brest-Litovsk Methods.

People sometimes say the socialists waste all their time fighting each other instead of uniting against the capitalist class. Yes, sometimes. But when · the reformist labour leaders consciously or unconsciously play the masters' game, they must expect to bear the brunt of the attack on the master class: and now that the tricks has in all lands become so common and the warning against it so insistent, it is hard to give them credit for knowing not what they do. When the labour movement was in its infancy, such treachery or direct or indirect venality or gullibility was comparatively rare. To-day the movement throughout the world has been collared by these types, who, like the Hun diplomatists with their ino annexation professions and simultaneous annexing actions, are there to pretend that there is no class struggle, that the system is not a robbery system, that the ruling gang at heart only wish their slaves well, as witnessed by the banquets, the publie offices held by labour, the joint boards, the high wages to the top grades of artisans, and the readiness with which the masters seek the aid of the labour leaders in times of dispute: while all the time the real grip on the real workers power has tightened to stranging point.

Why the German Strike Failed.

Here is an instance to give our social patriots something to think about. At a time when we are apt to expect greater wonders from German than from British socialists (whereas they are all fed with the same slosh) these remarks of the Bolshevik plenipotentiary to England are of critical importance. Litvinoff (who, by the way, like other Russian revolutionaries, mecessarily had several aliases) says:—

"In the German army, with whom we were in direct touch, a favourable movement began, but was not sustained. This was due perhaps more to their opportunist leaders than to the government. The former are still boasting that they stopped the German strike. The same kind of thing applies to other countries. The genuine socialist cannot fight against the (genuine) working class. He must be with that class even when it blunders. The Bolsheviks had to fight against capitalists, Germans and epportunist socialists."

Why British "Labour" Fails.

The Henderson-McDonald crowd are rehearing for the same part. McDonald was up against the Clyde men who wanted to strike against the Manpower Bill, and as Comrade Andrews said in the account we published last week, at the Inter-Allied Labour Conference, Bolshevism was, like a prostitute, barely mentioned in that highly respectable assembly.

Why the S.A.I.F. Fails.

The type is rampant in this country: the smug trade unionists, the white labour policy-ites, and the rest of that ilk. The new Man-power Bill, exempts. parsons, but labour takirs have been exempted from the stark. This week the egregious Crawford, in his usual communique to the 'Star,' pass the masters on the back--the master, who "welcomed any measures that would lead to co-ordinated effort on betalf of the men as a whole 'alias, the trade unionist white artisans feder tion "while they appreciated the price the men took in their separate callags (alias, craft dis-unionism). "It appears" to Archibald "that the war has revolutionised the ideas of the employing classes, and this is evidenced by the fact that the old type of employer seems to have disappeared and a new type with more advanced and liberal ideas has come to the fore. A new philosophy in regard to the relation of capital and labour has sprung up embodying the idea of joint boards which "should give to the working classes an opportunity of having their say in the management of industry the advantages of co-operation can be gained, and employers can look forward to the development of industry with more security."

The Confidence Trick.

A new philosophy? Pah! The ancestral falsehood of the hand in-hand progress of capitalist and working man, says de Leon, egets the son falsehood of the equality of working man and capitalist; the son falsehood begets the grandson fraud of contracts and you will see how the grandson fraud litters a prolific progeny of its ilk to labour's undoing.

The workers believed '/ (to paraphrase another passage from the Preamble') "that labour was the object of their enthusiasm, until the hour of danger—the proclamation by socialists of real labour class-war principles among all the proletarians, black or white, 'enemy' or friend—exposes the fact that what they really enthus of for was the flesh-pots of the S.A. industrial Federation."

A Black Hundred.

Yes, submit to joint boards and paternal "security" schemes, and give sops to a sufficient handful of trade unionists to secure them as Kaiser Capital's bodyguard, and you take the sting from the mass. Real "workers" control of industry" has to be bitterly fought for, as in Russia; a "control applauded by smiling bosses and secured by joint boards a la Crawford is no control at all, it is a surrender of the rank and file for the benefit of a few officers and non-coms.

A "Welfare" Movement.

Once more take warning from Germany --- bearing in mind Litvinoff's. words — of what paralysis the good kind employers can in the long run induce by their 'benefits in return, for guarantees. Said a 'Star cable last week: The Germans will not effect anything by strikes during the war. hupps have a system of pensions and benefit funds in regard to which the men immediately lose their rights if they threaten trouble. Should they strike the choice is offered to them between continuing work or going into the army. The result is that they think twice before striking and not at all before going back to WORK

"Bury the Hatchet" means "Draw the Sword."

li is by the Crawford policy; in its last results, that inilitarism, ves German militarism, is maintained, and the war continued. This is the kind of "Labourism" that slinks cowed into patriotic impotence at the raising of the mailed fist. That is why "the socialists failed to prevent the war": the working men of the world were mentally and physically emasculated by the false doctrines of their opportunist leaders. Vandervelde pitiably admitted the situation at the Inter-Allied Conference when he said: "If. the German offensive were to succeed the resolutions we pass would be mere serups of puper.

The Durban Season.

"NATIVE UNREST."

In anticipation of a record season the Durban ricksha owners notified the mative rick-ha pullers that from Monday, the loth inst., the hire price of rickshus from the yards would be increased. Is. per day. The news was taken philosophically by the ricksha hovs and everyone was enquiring what was the matter when on Monday morning not a single ricksha was on the streets. Bye and bye we hear that the boys have stopped moving. Without fuss, without mass meetings, without any agitation from I.S.I., members or anyone else, without even a trade union, the "owners" crawled to the "hirers" at 10.30, and by 11 a.m. the strike was won completely and the streets presented their usual hizarre appearance.

Probably the best example of real solidarity ever witnessed in Natal: which gives rise to a query in my mind, "Who causes 'native unrest'"?

H.W.H.

The Death Knell of Capitalism.

The efforts being Chamber of Mines and other associations of employers to buy the workers by throwing sops to them are nothing but a despairing attempt on the pairt of the capitalist class to side-track the. inevitable revolution that will destroy the most degrading phase of society that has existed since the advert of civilisation.

The beating of the empty tub called "democratic institutions," the hypocritical cant about "freedom," and all the claptrap of the servile intellectuals in their efforts to earn the wage paid by their economic masters, have too long blinded the masses to their economic servitude to those in possession of the tools of production.

These efforts to prolong the present system of exploitation are being ably backed by the trades union leaders. They are lending themselves as tools to carry out the schemes of the employing class. Many are doing so consciously, deliberately selling the workers to the employing class. These paid officials, owing to their narrow. selfish outlook, their parochial craft union vision of the labour movement. and their ignorance of the economic. forces controlling society, are paving the way that possibly may end in the establishment of an oligarchy such as that predicted by Jack London in The Iron Heel : a form of society in which the favoured few would have their status raised, whilst the mass would be sunk in the social guiter and, as helots and seris, denied the rights of human beings, as the coloured races of to-day are.

Whilst such a form of society is within the range of probability. Yet the factor that will prevent such a form of society is the consciousness that is growing amongst the workers--not iso rapidly in this country as in others-of the necessity for the solidarity of labour. This in the past has been a mere tinkling sound without any meaning to the craft unionist, for it is not possible to have or give an expression of solidarity to any movement that as made up of jarring elements, with the petty sectional outlook inevitable in a federation made up of such elements.

This consciousness of the need of solidarity is leading the workers to form their organisations on industrial lines with a class conscious busis, thus placing the labour movement in line with the spirit of the age.

This war has led to further amalgamation of capital. The big corporations have come together, uniting their interests and forming gigantic organiisations against which craft unionism would be powerless. To combat such organisations industrial unionism will, give expression to the solidarity of the workers and he the workers' reply to .the consolidation of capital.

The workers formed in a solid mass: as industrial unionists, unhampered with labour leaders, declining to waste their energies in the building up of large funds to insure their members against illness, refusing to be divided a by any line of demarcation such as divide craft unions—such organisation will marshal the workers to carry on the war against capitalism and be the nucleus from which will be formed the co-operative commonwealth.

Craft unionism, still clung to by most of the older generation of workers, is obsolete, just as the adherents of this form of disorganisation are tossilised. (linging to the ideas they e learned in their youth, these fossils have been left strauded, hugging a delusion, whilst the economic tide has flowed past them, carrying upon its crest the newer needs of the workers to meet the modern form of capitalistic organ-.1Sation.

Industrial unionism is the only form of organisation that meets the requirements of the workers. It is a righting organisation. Emotionalism. humanitarianism, and the old vapourings of the · identity of interest of capital and labour, are all moonshine. The fact that the capitalist class are patronising the craft unions is proof positive of their harmlessness to the possessing class. They know they can deal with the workers when divided as craft unionists, but not when formed on industrial lines. Divide and rule has ever been the maxim of the possessing class. We are all brothren now, say these hypocrites, prefending to be clothed with the new social conscience of humanitaranism.

Ambustial unionism is hased firmly on the class struggle. The class struggle must be fought at its source. It ean only be ended by the workers takme control and maintaining possession of the tools of production. It will be a seichtific growth within the old secrety of the torces that will emancipate the workers from the wage slavery of to-day.

The new spirit that is animating the worker in the industrials countries of the world sounds the death knell of the capitalistic world. The economic forces grind slow but sure, the rumbding of the future revolution is plainly to be heard. The spirit of emancipation is slowly but surely permeating the workers of the world. The capitalistic class may; with the aid of the misleaders of labour, attempt to lay the spirit, but they are powerless. No section of society can control the economie forces that compel society, irrespective of sectional or individual. wishes, to move along a definite path in obedience to those forces.

The workers are gradually gaining the dearer vision of their economic slavery. The ery has gone up, not for better-working conditions, but for freedom. The war, with its brutality, not only in the battle-fields of Europe but in the workshops preparing the munitions of war, is making the workers realise the brutality of our present system. The workers now know what State control means. Many in their ignorance have clamoured for it; they have got it now, and found it was if anything more brutal in its methods than were their previous taskmasters.

The spirit of solidarity animating the workers and finding expression in industrial unionism is the bright spot on the social horizon. Along that way lies the revolution that will place the workers in control of society, destroying class and giving social equality to every unit in the industrial republic.

Federation v. Railway

A circular recently issued by the National Union of Railway and Harbour Servants (S.A.) says:

"The recent conforme, arranged without authority from the railway stuff, between Mr. A. Crawford of the Industrial Federation and the Administration, now stands disclosed as an attempt to underent all grades, perbans with the necessary exception of a few short-service artisans. . . The whole business has been oriently calcallated to set one section of the artisans against another and to divide the whole railway staff in twain.

The conference arranged that "such legislation shall be passed" (sic) "as may be necessary to provide for the adjustment of the pay of the Fixed Establishment servants, or any other servants, in order to place them on the same basis as other artisans. It is agreed that the artisans have no nermanent place in the railway service: that the overtime rates and conditions a as applied to-day are satisfactory, and that those who have stopped working overtime must work it in future: that the abolition of piecework shall no longer be pressed for, and that the price of piecework will be lower in the coastal areas than elsewhere a score for North over South-Ahat in fact in uniform rate of pay thronghout the Union is not desirable or practicable; that everything is to be binding for the period of the war and three months thereafter ; and that if antisans do not accept the complete provisions at the agreement, they lose 1s. 4d. nor day.

And railwaymen, says the N.P.R. II.S. circular, have only just heard of it! "Mr. Crawford's explanation for excluding National Union representatives from his conference was that he could only discuss matters affecting artisans as potential members of the craft unions." (This from the Federation which passed pions resolutions the other day in favour of industrial union-(18m.) As a matter of fact, The has discussed the conditions and the privileges of every grade, and even tampered with their established political rights": the result being to "close further discussion upon almost every condition-s-official, statutory, and political--affecting the railway staff."

It is sad to see this young railway union, which aspires in some sense to be an industrial union, having in its first year to fight the very overlapping questions which industrial unionism claims to supersede. But on the merits, Burton's complete partisanship in Parliament for the Federation as against the National Union should be enough to show which stands for the hosses and which for the men.

"We won't go home till—the revolution": song of the German prisoners at Omsk. These are the prisoners of whom first the Entente and now the Junkers have been so afraid that now the latter demand a stoppage of revolutionary propaganda among them. The Bolsheviks can comply with tongue in cheek: there is no need for any more propaganda, for ther are all converts.

A Craft Union Strike.

Prominence has been given by the capitalist press to a businesslike, undemonstrative little strike affecting a couple of hundred white mechanics in Johannesburg town shops. Why? Eccause every such strike is a fresh disappointment to those who have laboured ever since January 1914 (and traded on the war for all it's worth) in buy over the skilled white workers as privileged buffers or stalking-horses for their tactics against the mass of itferior toilers. And they had some ground for their hopes, witness the supercilious contempt of these same workers for the humble efforts of Tarry's 'boys' a year ago to better their condition: earning £1 a week at most, the boys must for sooth be content with. that and shout hooray for labour when their superiors et a rise to £7 10s. and buy houses, pianos and fur couts. However, there are always redeeming elements in the A.S.E.: still "trailing clouds of glory do they come, and display awkward revolutionary symptoms just when, the now fashionable agreement having been signed, sealed and delivered, the bosses think they mave at last got their bird todsit still Hence the concern of the "Star" and "Mail" at the outbreak and the alacrity of the masters to comply, only saving their faces if possible for decency's sake. with the main demands.

What these ware in the last the first correctly tet out in the diffic More interest lies in the A.S.E. sattitude to the Federation, of which it is or was the chief support, and who-e secretary has by now come to be recognised both by capital and by sections. of labour as the official interloper in all such disputes. In reply to a request by the Federation to the strikers to admit two delegates each from the Moulders and Ironmoulders and from the Federation itself to address the meeting on what good work the Federation was doing in conjunction with these two Unions, the A.S.E. as heretofore, offered, with regret; to admit the Union's delevates if the Federation's was left out: which the Moulders refused, no doubt owing to Federation influence. When it came in picketing, therefore, the Mondiers and Boilermakers were not stopped: but it is plain that but for the fetters of officialdom they too would have been with the strikers; indeed there is some prospect of discussion hereafter as to their amalgamating with the A.S.E.-just as efforts are now being made to organise the garages and also rope in all apprentices. Meanwhile no time was being lost in bringing about an arbitration between the boilermakers and the masters, and Crawford was in a breakneck hurry to acquaint the strikers with its outcome, pleading with them to adopt the precedent and place their fate on the knees of that fine fellow, Macfie. "But in vain. for most of the A.S.E. have got Archie summed up: and though there is but little difference between the magisterial award and what the strikers want, vet ther want to win it through their own organised effort, not through Crawfords or Macfies, nor subject to any reservations, nor pursuant to any press appeals for "moderation in these troublous times '-although, be it noted, their demand for a fortnight's holiday on full pay was, owing to its novelty, promptly relegated to the very arbitration that has been declined on other points.

From Front and Rear.

The "Labour Leader" reports two huge food profest meetings in Birmingham, at one of which an amendment from the floor caffing on the workers to, organise, industrially, politically and internationally to stop the war was accepted by the chairman and carried unanimously. At a big "Food and Peace demonstration at Reading, some soldiers incited by officers made a rush for the flag (no doubt a red one). but the women beat them, and by the end of the meeting the soldiers joined in cheers for the International, sang the 'Red Plag.' and subscribed for a new banner.

The recent French Miners' ('ongress resolved in favour of peace without annexations, and expressed sympathy with the so-called 'defeatists' whom all the governments persecuted." There's working class opinion for you. published in an English labour paper at its peril. We always hear of the unanimous patriotism of the French socialists: but "it is only by a system of cooking the mandates, says "Common Sense. "that M. Renaudel and M. Albert Thomas have controlled the French Socialist Party for the last three veurs. But their day is closing. At the National Council of French Socialists in February there was a clear majority against voting war credits.

The Bolsheviks, says the "Manchester Guardian," seized the banks hecause they were supporting counter-revolution, and are trying to set up a system of communal economy in which each industry is controlled by workers and exchanges products with other workers syndicates without the passage of money.

"While Western Europe has heard about Armenian massacres, the massacre of 500,000 Central Asian Moslems by the Tsar's agents in the summer of 1916 has been "studiously hidden." "Manchester Guardian." That was the "reformed" Russian Government which the British Government delighted to recognise.

over, was the reply to some hungry privates in G.E.A. when they saw their officers lavishly entertaining certain captured Hun officers, and asked where do we come in? Richthofen, being a German baron, gets a swanky military funeral from the British who will never speak to a German again, while Tommy's and Hans' corpses lie stinking together in no-man's land. We are all one, or rather two, to-day!

Questions and Answers.

The recruiting committee is very busy at Port Natal, but their efforts do not seem to meet with the results they deserve. Anyhow every shop window in the town bears the old placard asking the old question: "Daddy, what did you do in the great war?"

It would seem that these committees have some idea that the rising generation will be as ignorant as they themselves were in their youth—and they haven't altered much; but suppose the working man's youngstee happens to be intelligent—which is quite possible, though the mere thought may appear ludicrous to our R.C. And suppose the man who could proughly puff his chest and skite about having "done 'is bit' should be asked a few questions like the following by his 20th century offspring:

"Daddy, did you fight to help to keep us all in wage slavery?"

"Daddy, did vou do vour bit to perpetuate the system which starves widows and orphans?"

Dadely, did you get crippled for life so that you could help build up a record national debt?"

"Daddy, did Mummy die while vou were at the front 'cos she couldn't work hard enough?"

Daddy, was your share of the 'glory' a cork leg, glass eve and unemployment for the rest of 'your life?"

Daddy, why didn't you get rich in the war, like Mr. Porkerham, who didn't 'do his bit'?"

Etc., Etc., Etc.

I wonder what Daddy would say?

Of course Porkenham's answer to the question would be laconic:

Daddy, whom did you do in the great war?

"Anybody."

Cape Notes.

Dame Rumour has it North from some unknown source that we, ostrich like, have our heads in the sand while the recruiting junkers are converting and collaring young Capetown students of the socialist movement. This, however, is the absolute antithesis to the real situation. The said junkers are wailing about their sad effects, while we are jubilant and enthusiastic over abounding evidence of many converts to the cause.

Adderley Street meetings are packed: 'Internationals' sell out in five minutes, and hunner collections follow the tale or the debate which it has latterty been our custom to adopt. The first 'combat was between the possibility of the Allies' "freedom" as against that of international socialism. The internationals won by a large majority and nobody lynched as was anticipated. The next was "The Class Struggle versus Philosophical Socialism." It was said the audience preferred "direct action" and "class conscious propaganda" to the theoretical or academic methods of the ideal socalists.

On May Day we have a meeting and invite the many known sympathisers to get some more of their sympathy and give them some of ours. On the 4th, the Saturday following, we are going to have a concert, American auction and anything else that will aid our funds, for which purpose it is held. Fortunately we are not responsible for any M.L.A.'s or M.P.C.'s, a situation that also saves us from being responsible for many sins. All those masqueráding as "socialists" in both Houses have allowed resolutions and war credits, aiding human destruction by the machinery of the capitalists' governments, to receive their unanumous approval. And judging from the appearance of most of these stalwart politicians it seems to be a case of Don't do as I do, brave soldier but do as I tell vou."

A manifesto on the lines of the Russian Bolsheviks, issued by the S.D.F. to the various "democratic" bodies and trade unions, was a bit too much like democracy for their liking. The Jewish Socialist Society and the Peace and Arbitration Society were the only people who smiled on our suggestions. The rest are waiting for the "freedom" they are aiding the Allies to gain. Who says we're not recruiting? Jingoism versus Socialism was never more clearly defined.

League Notes.

BENONI DISTRIBUTORS. — The attention of the local Industrial Distributors' Union is being directed towards the Reef. A meeting was held a fortnight ago in Benoni at which a branch was formed. Thirty of those present joined up, half of whom paid their subscriptions at once. Comrade Hanscomb was the principal speaker. Another meeting is to be held this evening at which several comrades have been invited to speak.

LABOUR DAY.—This year our International Labour Day (May 1) is to be devoted mainly to the distribution of leaflets. In addition a public meeting is to be held at the Pilkington Hall, Main Street, Ferreirastown, commencing at 8 p.m. Talbot Williams has consented to assist League/members on the platform.

MARX SOCIAL. — The Entertainment Committee is issuing invitations for a social to be held on Saturday. May 4, the eve of the Marx Centenary. Should any "International" subscribers have been inadvertently omitted from the invitation list, will they please accept this paragraph instead of the formal card as an expression of welcome?

MARX CENTENARY. — Sunday. May 5, being the hundredth anniversary of the birth of the great revolutionary and economist, special importance attaches to the public meeting which will be held in commemoration of his teachings, in the Palmerston Hall, Commissioner Street, and which every socialist should attend without fail at 8 p.m.

£6 OR FOUR WEEKS.—Comrade W. Rosenberg tells us he had to appear in the Port Elizabeth Courts for making purely socialistic remarks. The magistrate found "that the remarks were directed against England." and ordered £6 or four weeks. Our comrade says he handed a copy of the "International" to the magistrate.

Comb out the Slackers!

"The economic interests of the international capitalist class," to adapt Mr. Arthur Balfour's words referring to German capitalists in particular in his famous letter to President Wilson, "mould and direct the minds of the people." When that class go to war, or rather, unlike the kings and barons of old who led their armies into the battle, send us their wage slaves to take the risks for them, they give the word to their hired scribes to spring all imaginable dope upon our often credulous ears.

Few will remember nowadays, the high-sounding appeals to righteousness, honour and liberty, mingled with alarm, so well exposed by Fox in Napoleonic times, or even the similar cries when Turkey's cause was espoused in the Crimea by England and France; but many Englishmen will recall how the same toxic stimulus of "lofty principles" was pumped into us on the eve of the Anglo-Boer war; how the halls at "Home" rang with our enthusiastic cheers, how we were going to fight on the side of the weak against oppression, etc., etc. The columns of the whole press were surcharged with the filthiest vilification of the people of the Transvaal. We "caught on," and we came out to this country. After it was all over, we found we could starve in the gutter. We asked ourselves, what had we really come out for: The answer is plain to see upon the maps and plans hanging on the walls of any land and estate agent. Three-fifths of the Transvaal is splashed with green, blue, red and yellow, each colour representing the property of a trust or combine; and a large proportion of the rest-the blanks in between the sphashes—is held by the Capitalist Executive, the Government.

So terrific is the 'moral' pressure exerted by the 'organs of public opinion' upon the unsophisticated though heroic wage-earner. Well may the Cabinet spokesmen of capital's executives, themselves servants of the ambition of the real powers behind the scenes, testify to the enormity of their responsibility. And now another ca

And now another capitalist press and platform campaign has begun, and "combing-out"—of the workers—is the order of the day.

Why should not the workers start a working class press and platform campaign for a "combing-out" of the capitalists and exploiters of labour—the real slackers? Take the names of all of them, and of their parsons, their politidian's and their editors, especially those who have been to the fore in telling us "to oo." If they want to be "prominent" let them lead us to glory. "For how can they die better than facing fearful odds for the ashes of their Pathers and the Temples of their Gods?" Since they own all the temples, the banks, the corporations, trusts and joint stock concerns, the factories. the mines and the land, surely it is only logical that these patriots should at least lead us into battle, us who own no temples and no land, not even enough to fill the homely flower pot. What better sacrifice can ther make than to give up their all for their righteousness, their homour, and their liberty—since these are gilt-edged? By the side of such a sacrifice, that of the workers fades into insignificance. Let us turn these slacking clacking 'say gos' into 'say comes': better late than never, let our recruiters even at the eleventh hour smell out the silent slecker 'behind the scenes' and thrust him to the front.

Meanwhile let us hasten the day when all we workers of the world shall voluntarily tear away the capitalist cobwebs that obscure our judgment, and unite to rescue ourselves from the claws of the tiger that wallows in our blood. For then only can we be "free" and, with the same energy with which we have made the world beautiful for him, make it beautiful for ourselves.

H

Cannon Fodder.

In these days of fresh air and excitement, particularly the latter, we are constantly being reminded by very respectable members of society that voung men are wanted as food for cannon. Not long ago the Union Government, though it turned down conscription as such, set up a recruiting committee with the laudable object of getting men to defend the Empire for capital. How nice! Now, we know that every army, from Salvation to Kitchener's, has been recruited on its stomach. Bearing that in mind, the recruiting committee have per maded the employing class to put into operation a hastard form of conscription known as economic conscription, whereby a man is deprived of his living in order that he shall join the army of his own free will; and having done so his function is to protect the ve.v penple who in times of peace rob him, and in time of war compel him to fight for them.

Ah, but here we run up against that wise individual who has been reading the "Star" and says: "Yes. I agree with you up to a certain point, but you must remember this war is different from all other wars, because this is a war to end war."

Now let us examine this brilliant theory as put forward by the man in the street. In the first place we agree with him that this war is different from all other wars, inasmuch as it is more brutal and gigantic: but we do not agree that it is a war to end war. Quite the contrary. For so long as we have capitalism as the system of society so long shall we have wars, because capitalism creates Imperialism and Insperialism militarism and militarism war. Therefore we contend the only war to end war is the "class war," When the "class war is-finished and classes are abolished and the worker gets the full results of his labour then and not until then will wars be ended.
